THE SUSTAINABILITY OFFICE

What do we do?

The Sustainability Office is a central team dedicated to integrating sustainability across all domains of the university and beyond. We monitor and stimulate the transition to a sustainable university, advise our Executive Board on all sustainability matters, and connect all necessary stakeholders to achieve our goals. A part of the Sustainability Office is the TU/e Go Green Office (GGO), a team of students committed to integrating Sustainability into the lives of all TU/e students. The Sustainability Office collaborates closely with our Sustainability Ambassador, Anna J. Wieczorek, and works in partnership with various internal and external departments and organizations. An Advisory Board for Sustainability provides guidance and advice.

We recognize that as a society, we have surpassed planetary and social boundaries.

It is important to restore the balance of a thriving economy within its ecological and social limits.

Such a process implies a transformation - a radical change in how we fulfill our societal needs. It means both technical and social innovation and each of us taking responsibility and contributing.

For a university that seeks societal relevance and aims to address societal challenges, it means that it has to transform itself.

This transformation implies a radical rethinking of the dominant ways of doing research and education, running our campus operations, and our governance.
