A student owns the intellectual property (IP) unless:

- An assignment that is part of the education involves a company that wishes to obtain the results (IP).

  - The student agrees to the transfer of the IP to the company and completes the assignment.
  - The student does not agree to the transfer of the IP and asks the Examination Board of his or her degree programme for a replacement assignment.

- The IP is generated as part of an assignment at a research group or company (i.e. Bachelor’s or Master’s internship/graduation project).

  - The student agrees to the transfer of the IP and obtains the same rights to a share in any future profits derived from the IP as a regular employee.
  - In the case of an internship with a company, the student generally does not share in the profits.
