Declaration of solidarity for the women situation in Iran

The year 2022 is going to end soon but the fight of “the women of Iran” for their very basic rights is not over. It all started from September 16th, when the 22-year-old Mahsa Amini died while in the custody of the morality police in Iran for allegedly not wearing the hijab in accordance with the government standards.

The so-called morality police have been operating in Iran since the 1979 Islamic revolution, in different forms and under different names, harassing women and even young girls in their private and public spheres ever since. However, the outrageous death of Mahsa in September initiated a series of protests by the people of Iran, women and men, all over the country, which is continuing non-stop up until now. These protests, with the slogan "Women, Life, Freedom" and aiming at revolutionizing how the Islamic regime steals women’s basic rights, have been received with horrifying reactions by the Iranian government. Hundreds of people, including children and teenagers, have been killed during the past few months. Just recently, the 23-year-old Mohsen Shekari was executed, only because of his participation in the street protests. On the 12th of December, in a gruesome public hanging, another prisoner, earlier detained because of involvement in protests, was executed: his name was Majid Reza Rahnavard. On top of these, the Islamic Republic has seriously hindered the internet access in all of Iran and the social media are blocked to prevent the spread of the news to the outside world.

The WISE network at TU/e condemns these acts and stands in solidarity with all the people in Iran, and particularly with the brave girls and women who have to take this fight to 2023.

Women InSpired

Our pick for this edition of our Women InSpired series is Carolyn Bertozzi, one of the 2022 Nobel Prize winners in Chemistry. Carolyn was born in Boston, MA, USA, and is currently a professor at Stanford University (CA, USA), also affiliated to the Howard Hughes Medical Institute (USA).

She was awarded the prize for her key contributions to the development of click chemistry and biorthogonal chemistry. Her discoveries started revolutionizing chemical reactions in living organisms since the early 2000s, paving the path towards improved tracking of bio-processes and targeting of cancer pharmaceuticals. Among the many recognitions of her work, she was the first woman to receive the Lemelson-MIT Prize faculty award. She is also a successful entrepreneur, a passionate advocate for diversity and an important role model, particularly for LGBTQ+ people.
